ADVENTURE ABROAD

Dining at a Beijing restaurant savoring Peking duck or Jiaozi dumplings will not only boost your endorphins but also your resume and job prospects. Many U.S. employers expect jobseekers to have training in multiple languages and cultures. That expectation puts graduates with study abroad experience ahead of the employment curve. Baruch’s savy students know this.

Our Study Abroad Office, which is located in the Weissman Center for International Business, continues to attract a vast number of students with diverse backgrounds and interests. Each year more than 300 Baruchians take advantage of the program and travel to different parts of the world—from Argentina to Senegal, Beijing to Zurich, Chulalongkorn University in Thailand to Oxford University in England—for a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

The student activities calendar is filled throughout the year with parties, cultural celebrations, and career events sponsored by many of the academic and professional organizations.

The Office of Student Life sponsors and coordinates a number of large-scale events, such as the Fall Club Fair and Spring Fling Street Fair on East 25th Street. You’ll also find organized student leadership training programs, charitable fundraising activities, and discount ticket programs to movies, comedy clubs, and the theatre.

Make friendships that last a lifetime, develop invaluable professional contacts, get out into the community and make a difference! Study together, work together, party together. It’s all here.

Facebook, Twitter, and other social networking sites have changed the way we all interact. But nothing will ever replace the face-to-face of campus clubs and parties.

Baruch has over 170 clubs and organizations representing co-curricular, social, and cultural interests. The Accounting Society, American Marketing Association, Archery Club, Ballroom Dance Organization, Bangladesh Student Association, Billiards & Bowling, Bio Med Society, Black Student Union, Chabad Club, Chess Club, Chinese Christian Fellowship, and the Collegiate Association of Women in Business—and that’s just some of the clubs beginning with the letters “A,” “B,” and “C!” Student clubs enter national competitions and attend many national conferences.

How Suite It Is

If you have dreamed of going to college in New York City but were concerned about housing, worry no more. Baruch students can opt to live in a state-of-the-art residence hall easily reached from the College by subway or bus. The residence halls feature modern, comfortable, and affordable student facilities; rooms are equipped with a refrigerator, microwave, Internet service, and cable. Whether you come to us from Lynbrook or London, you can enjoy high-quality, independent New York City student residences. For more information, call Educational Housing Services at 800-385-1689.

For some, the biggest obstacle to becoming a lawyer is getting into law school. There is no better way to make sure that happens than Baruch’s Max Berger Pre-Law Program, which offers one-on-campus meetings with attorneys and law school admissions officers as well as free LSAT preparation. In fall 2010, Max Berger Program “graduates” enrolled in some of the country’s finest law schools: Camille Fletcher (Murray Berghbaum HS) enrolled at Stanford University Law School, Ilya Leyvi (Brooklyn Technical HS) at Cornell University Law School, and Tamara Gavrilova (Prospect Park Yeshiva) at the University of Illinois College of Law.

Baruch's athletic teams—nicknamed the Bearcats—won six CUNY Athletic Conference (CUNYAC) championships (men's volleyball, women's basketball, women's cross country, men's and women's swimming, and softball) and finished in second place in three other sports (baseball, women's tennis, and women's volleyball) to help round off a successful 2009–10 athletics year. The softball team won its first championship in school history. The CUNYAC baseball team earned the highest individual distinction in intercollegiate athletics by each being named All-Americans. The volleyball team also finished the season ranked #7 nationally in the final NCAA Division III poll.

The softball team won its first championship in school history. Melissa Pena (W.C. Bryant HS) was named the CUNYAC MVP of the championship tournament, while freshman Nicole Flint (Brentwood HS) was named the CUNYAC Rookie of the Year.

The men's volleyball team won its fourth CUNYAC championship in the past five years. Juniors Eryk Kowalski (Zabno, Poland) and Pablo Oliveira (Uberlandia, Brazil) earned the highest individual distinction in Intercollegiate Athletics by each being named All-Americans. The volleyball team also finished the season ranked #7 nationally in the final NCAA Division III poll.

The women's basketball team recorded its sixth straight season of winning 21 games or more behind the efforts of league MVP Monique Salmon (Harry S. Truman HS) and league all-star Megan Bauwens (Lakeland HS, Michigan).

Off the field (or in this case, out of the water), men's swimmer Justin Wang (Stuyvesant HS) (above left) was named the 2010 CUNYAC Male Scholar-Athlete of the Year. Justin earned a 3.74 GPA and captured the team to its first CUNYAC championship ever.

POWER STATS

The new president of Baruch College knows it and so do the country's college rating services. “In my estimation, Baruch has the potential to be one of the best public colleges in the nation,” says President Mitchel Wallerstein.

Baruch is on an unstoppable race to the top of nationwide college ratings, most of which are determined from a pool of over 3,000 four-year institutions.

REAL-WORLD EXPERIENCE

Concerned about jobs and being career ready when you graduate? On-site Baruch labs make your ambitions attainable—even in tight economic times. Here are two standouts.

In today’s world of 24/7 news channels and never-ending networking platforms, real-world instruction for aspiring journalists is essential. Studio H, Baruch College’s million-dollar, state-of-the-art teaching environment, provides the real-world advantages of a simulated newsroom loaded with the latest technology.

The high intensity of the stock market is re-created at Baruch’s Wasserman Trading Floor/Subotnick Financial Services Center (shown here), the only one of its kind in New York City. The center allows students to simulate the buying and selling of stocks, bonds, and other commodities through high-tech computer workstations, live data feeds, and real-time market quotes.
