MTV Networks, Bloomberg News, WABC-TV, Entertainment Weekly, Sony Music Entertainment, the New York Daily News, Seventeen magazine, and more. Every day Baruch journalism students intern with magazines, online publications, radio and television outlets, and print newspapers that provide students with exciting, real-world media experience and opportunities to report, write, and appear before the camera and on radio.

These internships have maximum impact on students’ future. More than making coffee or photocopies, competitive internships offer Baruch’s students the chance to develop marketable skills, establish a network of contacts, and demonstrate that they can add value to an organization. And Baruch College journalism students aren’t the only undergrads with these opportunities, which cross all majors and schools.

“Going global” is a popular catchphrase at colleges because the modern world demands a knowledge of multiple cultures. Baruch students gain the competitive advantage of global experience through our Study Abroad Office.

In Summer 2011 alone, 105 Baruch students studied in 28 different cities in 16 countries, ranging from Argentina to the United Kingdom. The most popular destinations were China, Italy, and Spain. International internships are also available.

When it comes to national college rankings, Baruch gets an “A.” Year after year, the College edges closer to the topmost spots, besting thousands of other four-year institutions. Rankings on the rise offer some of the most reliable and unbiased proof that Baruch is enhancing the College experience for current and future students.

When we’re noticed, you’re noticed. Of course, rankings also offer a lot more than bragging rights for our students. Because when we’re noticed, you’re noticed.

Our rankings will help you:
- Get that special internship
- Get noticed by recruiters
- Get hired for your dream job upon graduation, and
- Gain admission to top graduate schools

In the talkback section of the Princeton Review, “What Baruch Students Say,” Baruch students described this school as “the best college value in New York City” and praised their “unparalleled internship, career and networking opportunities.”

BEARCATS SCORE

Baruch’s athletic teams—nicknamed the Bearcats—won four CUNY Athletic Conference (CUNYAC) championships (men’s volleyball, women’s basketball, men’s and women’s swimming) and finished in second place in seven other sports to help round off a successful 2010–11 sports year.

Pablo Oliveira (Newcomers HS) and Eryk Kowalski (Environmental Studies HS) were each named Division III Volleyball All-Americans for the second straight year.

The men’s and women’s swimming teams each won their second consecutive CUNYAC Championship.

Priscilla Arana (Bayside HS) was named the top female swimmer, winning CUNYAC Performer of the Year and MVP of the Championship Meet awards.

Off the field, men’s swimming and cross country student-athlete Agustin Lastra (LaSalle HS, Argentina) was named the 2011 CUNYAC Male Scholar-Athlete of the Year. Agustin earned a 3.74 GPA and helped lead the swimming team to its second consecutive championship.

The Bearcats are off to a spectacular 2011–12 year. The women’s volleyball team won its first CUNYAC championship since 2005 behind the efforts of Tournament MVP Melinda Santiago (Corners HS, California). Additionally, six Bearcats from women’s cross country and women’s tennis were awarded CUNY All-Star status for Fall 2011.
