

Neil J. Sullivan

Employment:

Baruch College – City University of New York (1978-present)
Professor, School of Public Affairs

Douglass College – Rutgers University (1977-78): Assistant
Professor, Department of Political Science

Education:

PhD 1978 Brandeis University – Department of Politics

MA 1972 University of Southern California – Department of Political Science

BA 1970 University of Southern California – Department of Political Science

Publications:

A. Books:

The Diamond in the Bronx: Yankee Stadium and the Politics of
New York, New York: Oxford University Press, 2001. New edition with Epilogue in 2008.

The Diamond Revolution: The Prospects for Baseball After the Collapse of Its Ruling Class,
New York: St. Martin's Press, 1992.

The Minors: The Struggles and Triumph of Baseball's Poor
Relation, New York: St. Martin's Press, 1990.

The Dodgers Move West, New York: Oxford University Press, 1987.

B. Chapters:

“Was the Move Justified?” The Dodgers Reader, Dan Riley, ed.
New York: Houghton Mifflin, 1992

“Major League Baseball and American Cities: A Strategy for Playing the Stadium Game,”
The Economics and Politics of Sports Facilities, Wilbur Rich, ed., Westport, Connecticut:
Quorum Books, 2000.

C. Articles:

“A Bad Deal for Baseball,” New York Times Op-Ed, December 3, 1996.

“Big League Welfare,” New York Times Op-Ed, November 4, 1995.

“Baseball Eyes Your Tax Dollar,” New York Daily News, July 9, 1995.

“How To Save Baseball From Itself,” New York Daily News, October 9, 1994.

“Stealing Home,” Chicago Times Magazine, September-October, 1988.

“Cities, Stadiums and Responsibilities,” New York Times, August 14, 1988.

D. Academic Articles:

“Baseball and Race: The Limits of Competition,” The Journal of Negro History, Volume LXXXIII, No. 3, Summer 1998.

“Major League Baseball and American Cities: A Strategy for Playing the Stadium Game,” Policy Studies Review, Vol. 15, No. 1, Spring 1998.

“The Cotton Dust Decision: The Confusion Continues,” Administrative Law Review, Summer, 1982.

“The Benzene Decision: A Case of Regulatory Confusion,” Administrative Law Review, Summer, 1981.

“Independent Adjudication and Occupational Safety and Health Policy: A Test for Administrative Court Theory,” Administrative Law Review, Spring, 1978.

Civic Affairs:

Member, Hudson Valley Board of Easter Seals, 2007–present.

Member, Zoning Board of Appeals, Yonkers, New York, 1998-present.

President, Park Hill Residents Association, Yonkers, New York, 1993-95. Board member, 1988-98.